E-Commerce Supplier Assessment

The massive number of product categories, suppliers and products have made today's quality control process even more complicated to general merchandise E-commerce retailers, seeking expertise support from third party service provider is becoming a trend in this market. In order to further enhance customer experience, E-commerce players fulfill the quality assurance requirement by means of supplier shrinking, standard setup, quality control and random inspection, using the knowledge and professional team of third party company to tackle the quality problem throughout the whole supply chain.

Taking B2B as an example, Alibaba Group has brought in third party certified company to get involved in factory audit and will extend to more supply chain processes step by step for better customer experience. Additionally third party service provider can also effectively resolve the quality issues for buyers requesting flexible supply chain (Low MOQ, Fast Production, Good quality). Therefore working with third party service providers has with no double become a trend of E-commerce development in near future.

Leverage Limited as a third party service provider with practical experience in E-commerce industry provides E-commerce clients with an end-to-end quality solution. We have reached strategic agreement with a series of E-commerce retailers on supplier audit program. Leverage have come up with a set of systematic solution for clients to enhance corporate brand, promote products rapidly and gain customer trust, we also help client optimize supplier base, consolidate manufacturer resources and improve the trust between buyer and supplier.

Leverage has already globally promoted our "Valued Supplier" certification to quite a few E-commerce retailers. The enterprises successfully be qualified will not only get the "Valued Supplier" certificate, exclusive certification mark and QR Code, but be listed in Leverage valued supplier database as well. Buyers will be able to check the certificate validity using this platform and get more information about it. This all helps retailers resolve the supplier trust crisis.

CoC Audit

A Code of Conduct (CoC) is a set of regulations governing corporate and business practices according to acceptable standards. By implementing a CoC, a company or organisation is committed to operate its business with the highest standards of business ethics, which exceed the local law requirement. Each brand and importer can develop their own CoC standard to which vendors are expected to comply. Companies are required to perform regular audits on vendors to ensure compliance with the requirements of the CoC throughout the supply chain.

Factories are assessed against a list of nine standards (child labor, forced labor, health & safety, freedom of association, discrimination, etc.) as well as customer specified requirements to ensure fair & ethical production of goods.

The difference between a general social audit and a Code of Conduct audit is that we can customize the audit standards and report template to align with client's special focus and requirement. A tailor-made CoC audit solution for client will mitigate your risks throughout the whole supply chain.

The social audit addresses customer concerns regarding human rights in the workplace. It is a detailed assessment identifying local practices that may not conform to the global SA 8000 ethical standards and/or the customers own internal standards regarding the treatment of workers. Among other things, adherence to SA 8000 requires, for example, the prohibition of child and forced labor, that employees work a maximum of 48 hours per week (not include overtime) with one day off and the demand for and introduction of humane working conditions.

Corporate Integrity Evaluation

Lack of honesty is the dirty code in business deal

Leverage help build up an correlated integrity management system with identifiability element for clients and help establish an honest business partnership with mutual trust. Our integrity evaluation system take theories of ethical standard, quality, risk and social compliance into consideration, also refers to the integrity guidance published by government department.

Integrity is the basic ethical standard that supplier should be compliant with, it is the basic requirement to all suppliers. Under current circumstances, lack of transparency between supply chain participants has posed a risk to business sustainability.

We heard a lot about suppliers sometimes being dishonest during the factory audit, some prepared for one more fake document or forced workers not to tell truth. Due to time limit of audit, sometimes the audit result does not reflect the real image, that's why buyers in most cases can hardly identify the key risks to business.

The focus based on this evaluation system includes legal requirement, technical requirement, integrity compliance and social compliance.
